Cookbook project aims to raise funds

■ Pets &amp; People Alliance selling 'Doggone Good Recipes'

Pets & People Alliance has always been about helping animals in need.

When it was Pasadena Pet Adoption, it focused on finding new families for homeless animals.

Since adopting its new name nearly two years ago, the organization has focused on raising funds for humane projects in Pasadena and the Greater Clear Lake area.

The group wants to continue to work quietly behind the scenes to save and improve animals' lives.

"I find the people involved are really dedicated and interested in improving the situation of animals in our community," said Wayne Holt, who has been active with the group for about 10 years.

Its efforts have provided veterinarian care for shelter dogs and cats and helped area families spay and neuter their pets.

In one case, the alliance was able to provide care for an injured shelter dog slated for euthanasia. After recovering, the dog was adopted.

The nonprofit organization now is striving to raise money through sales of its book, Doggone Good Recipes & Ins-Purr-Rational Stories, $20.

The book is a collection of recipes and reflections from the alliance's membership, displayed with photos of their beloved pets.

"These aren't just pets; they're family members," Holt said. "These people (the book contributors) wanted to share their stories."

Some of the stories are humorous, Holt said, and many touch the heartstrings.

"There's a lot in it that people who are animal lovers will relate with," said Holt, who contributed photos of his cat, Andy, for the project.

The recipes are worth checking out, too, he said. The group made some finger food and desserts from the book for a city Thanksgiving event. The food was a hit.

Members Beverly Helms and Maye Atkins devoted a great deal of time to getting the Doggone Good Recipes project under way. Teena Miller later joined the efforts to help with layout and composition, as well as book assembly.

The alliance previously had not had a major fundraiser, said Helms, who has been with the organization from the beginning. She had seen other groups publish cookbooks and was confident the alliance could do the same.

"Everybody has recipes, even if they don't cook," Helms said. "Then we could incorporate the stories, the cute stories. We already hear the sad stories."

One of the first anecdotes selected for the book is the story of an area boy with autism and the dog matched with him through Pasadena Animal Control and Adoption.

The boy's first dog had died and his mom wanted the new dog in his life to be a good match. It was.

"They went out of their way to find a dog for the boy," said Helms, who has six cats. "It was just such a heart-warming story."

The alliance also supports the city's dog park, Paws in the Park, 5274 Burke Road, which opened last year and needs trees.

Chau's Tailor and Alterations

Prior to opening Chau's Tailor, La Porte residents Huy Huynh and his wife Chau co-owned and operated an alterations business in Oklahoma City. The couple, who married in 1993, relocated to La Porte three years ago, and recently celebrated the opening of their new business.

Chau, who was born in Vietnam, began the art of sewing and custom-tailoring at 17. In 1991, she immigrated to the United States, and found work at an exclusive couture salon in Oklahoma, where she continued to work her magic with fabrics. But her dream was to own a business of her own, and with the recent opening of Chau's Tailor, that American Dream came true.
